“Showing a structuralist matrix, - the descriptive report states - the project scheme overlaps dwellings that appear to be founded and related to the ground, moving away from the idea of multi-family housing and approaching the idea of single-family high-rise housing”.

“Each house has its own individuality with a terrace and garden around it. An ideological and dreamlike representation between earth and sky, between the city and the sea. Between the fluidity of the common spaces that are lost in the interior-exterior relationship and even in the distant horizon and the compartmentalization of the rooms, the uses are privileged by the exception”.
