Altafulla is a well-preserved villa that respects its protected environment and enjoys a mild, warm climate. Altafulla is like an island nestled between the conurbation of Barcelona and Tarragona and the mass tourism of the Costa Dorada.

The villa was declared a cultural asset of national interest in 1998 by the Generalitat of Catalonia, thanks mainly to the walled town and its surrounding villages. Two years later, in 2000, it was also declared a World Heritage Site by UNESCO for the Roman villa of Els Munts.
